The number for those people who make a spiders are gossamers; and all those who have read White's Natural Ilisdescription of the showers he observed. One of these, he tells us, continued for nearly a whole day and the gossamers descended from a surprising height, for when one gentleman uscended a hill near at hand some three hundred feet high he found that the spiders were dropping from a region in the ntmosphere that was still beyond the reach of his gaze. Dr. Martin Lister named this aerial spider "the bird," from the facility with which It can traverse the air; and upon one occasiou when he observed a shower of them at York he ascended to the top of the minster and found that even at that altitude he was still below their level-that they were descending from some region above that standpoint. Darwin, another observer of spidershowers, describes one he saw in 1832, when on board the Beagle, at the mouth of the La l'lata river, when the vessel was some sixty miles from land; and he seems to have been the first to notice that each parachute of gossamer earried a spider aeronaut, for he not only observed them arrive on board the launch forth again "on the bosom of was in he would be healthy. the palpitating air." These gossaraer showers are great mysterles and once seen caunot very readily be forgotten, for the air on these occasions becomes literally erowded with the tiny parachutes mentioned, which are composed of a few threads of almost invisible gossamer, with a small but lively
